

Cluj-Napoca

Academic Center

In Cluj, the academic activity begins in the 16th century, with the foundation of the first college in the country (1581) that operated according to the Charter of European Universities of those times. Some laical and religious schools are established in the 17th and 18th centuries, and in the 19th century, the academic phenomenon starts to develop. In 1919, after the unification, on the 1st of December 1918, the first Romanian academic institutions are established in Transylvania: the “Superior Dacia” University, the Conservatory of Music and Dramatic Art, the Academy of Superior Commercial Studies (1919) and the School of Fine Arts (1926).

At present, the University of Art and Design in Cluj-Napoca is an integrant part of Cluj academic education, together with “Babeş-Bolyai” University, “Iuliu Hațieganu” University of Medicine and Pharmacy, Technical University, University of Agricultural Studies, “Gheorghe Dima” Music Academy and different other private universities. About 80,000 students study every year in these institutions, guided by a teaching staff comprising over 3500 specialists.

Cultural and artistic life

Cluj-Napoca has a cultural and artistic life invigorated by the National Theater, Romanian Opera, Hungarian State Theater, Hungarian Opera, “Puck” Puppet Theater, as well as by different museums and art galleries: the Art Museum, the Ethnographic Museum – with an exquisite out-doors section, the National History Museum of Transylvania. “Transylvania” State Philharmonic, as well as Antifonia choir, enjoying worldwide fame. Moreover, professional associations, such as the Visual Artists Union, the Architects’ Union, the Writers’ Union, etc., bring an important contribution to the city’s cultural life. The three large libraries of Cluj-Napoca, the University Central Library, “Octavian Goga” County Library and the Academy Library, shelter books and manuscripts of great value. The city’s cultural life is completed by the activities of the British, French, German and Italian cultural centers, as well as by the culture magazines, among which: Steaua, Tribuna, Apostrof, Echinox, Idea.

THE UNIVERSITY OF ART AND DESIGN IN CLUJ-NAPOCA

The main goal of the UNIVERSITY OF ART AND DESIGN in CLUJ-NAPOCA (UAD) is to train specialists in the field of fine and decorative arts and design, who would have a significant impact in the cultural, commercial and industrial fields of contemporary society, as well as to train art teachers for pre-university and university level. UAD wishes to transform its graduates into initiators of qualitative transformation of the human, spiritual and material environment. The University of Art and Design offers its students a high level of visual education through teaching methods that value the native cultural and artistic tradition, but also assimilate forms of contemporary artistic language.

International relations and PR

Communication is a sensitive process, of a major importance within any organization or public or private institutions. In order to continuously promote the University's activities and to permanently improve the quality on an institutional level, UAD tries to develop its educational programs, to protect its public (students, employees, mass-media, the professional artistic community, the entire community), to maintain the image that it already has. For all these a series of techniques and adequate communication strategies are used in order to accomplish the purposes. For UAD, communication is as important as the financial resources, the material, and human and information ones.
